A 3 days training, which targeted several psychologists and social workers, was conducted at BASR's main facility. The training was organized by the BASR’s psychosocial intervention program, in coordination with the Palestinian Union of Social Workers and Psychologists and with the support of the Palestinian Health Sector Reform and Development Project.

The workshop aimed at helping professionals better understand their emotional life in order to develop their empathy towards beneficiaries; enhancing the effectiveness and efficiency of child professionals’ work and helping them avoid judgmental attitudes towards their beneficiaries. This training was based on general psychoanalytical concepts and the methodology was built on the personality theory of Carl Rogers (person centered therapy) as well as on Moreno’s theory (group therapy).